20 years for girlfriend's Queens murder

A Queens man was sentenced to 20 years in prison for stabbing his girlfriend to death. Queens District Attorney Richard Brown said yesterday that Tigran Tambiev, 46, will spend two decades behind bars. Prosecutors say he repeatedly stabbed his girlfriend, Susan Woolf, 49, in the back and chest during a 2009 domestic dispute. Her body was found the next day in their Long Island City apartment.

Fighters face off

A boxing fight will kick off Saturday night at the new Barclays Center in Brooklyn. Barclays is billing the match as the first time in 80 years big-time boxing is arriving in the borough. Danny "Swift" Garcia will battle Erik "El Terrible" Morales, from Mexico. Also, Paulie "Magic Man" Malignaggi, from Brooklyn, will go up against Pablo Cesar "El Demoledor" Cano.

Father denies son's part in bomb attempt

DHAKA, BANGLADESH. The father of a Bangladeshi man accused of attempting to blow up the New York Federal Reserve Bank denied on Thursday that his son was involved and said he was the victim of a "racist conspiracy."

Quazi Mohammad Rezwanul Ahsan Nafis, 21, was arrested on Wednesday and faces charges of attempting to use a weapon of mass destruction and attempting to provide material support to al Qaeda.

"This is nothing but a conspiracy," his father Quazi Mohammad Ahsanullah told reporters in the Bangladeshi capital Dhaka.

"The intelligence of the USA is playing with a mere boy whom we sent for higher study. The allegation against my son is not true at all. He could not even drive a car. How was he caught with a van?" he said.

Nafis appeared in a Brooklyn court on Wednesday. The criminal complaint against him said he had entered the United States in January and that he had said he was in contact with members of al Qaeda overseas. Nafis had been a business student in Bangladesh, before leaving to study computer science in the United States.

Councilman wants blow guns banned

BRONX. After Metro wrote about how dangerous blow guns are being used to hunt birds and squirrels in city parks, and that the guns are sold in local bodegas and corner stores in the Bronx, Councilman James Vacca is now introducing legislation to ban the sale of blow guns in New York City. The blow guns, which are sold at stores near Pelham Bay Park, are considered toys. They are not usually considered dangerous to humans, Vacca said, but they are lethal to animals and are illegal for hunting. "They serve no productive purpose, especially when they are used illegally and unacceptably to kill and maim animals," said Vacca. ● METRO/CB

LOWER MANHATTAN. A money-laundering suspect tried to hang himself in a holding cell Thursday at the Office of the Special Narcotics Prosecutor in downtown Manhattan, sources confirmed to Metro. 32-year-old Oscar Batista was set to be arraigned just before he attempted suicide at 2:15 p.m. on Thursday. He survived the suicide attempt, and was taken to Bellevue hospital for treatment. ● METRO/CG

Most New Yorkers happy, but still want a better apt.

► Biggest problems in the city are employment, safety and finding housing, Municipal Arts Society survey finds ► But most say they are happy to be in The Big Apple ► Many glad to have close transportation and green spaces

Most New Yorkers say that the city is still an enviable place to live, but not everything is all that bright and shiny.

A new report from the Municipal Art Society revealed Thursday that New Yorkers think safety and the cost of living are the two toughest things about living in The Big Apple.

The survey was part of the Municipal Art Society Summit for New York City, which consisted of two days of panels and discussions brainstorming how to make the five boroughs more livable.

An overwhelming majority of New Yorkers — 84 percent — said that life in New York is generally good.

But about one in five expressed concern about employment and safety, along with what the survey calls "that perennial source of anxiety" — housing.

Not surprisingly, people making more money were more content with life in the city: Respondents who made more than $75,000 found New York to be kinder.

Also, people in Manhattan and Brooklyn were happier, according to the survey.

61%

New Yorkers were happy to have more green spaces, with 61 percent pleased overall and Manhattan and Staten Island residents feeling the luckiest with access to green space.

► Nineteen percent of New Yorkers are concerned about housing.

Borough awards

- Best place to live: Manhattan
- Most artistic: Manhattan
- Best value for the money: Queens
- Best place to start a new business: Manhattan

But not everything was a complaint.

Nearly all New Yorkers said they were happy with their public transportation options — 94 percent said they could easily hop on a train or bus.

Dirty streets, especially up in the good ol' Bronx

Even though overall, 79 percent of New Yorkers said their neighborhoods are clean, 27 percent of Bronx residents disagreed — less than a third would consider their streets sparkling. However, the Bronx showed the greatest improvement among people who think their neighborhoods are good places to raise children — 67 percent said this in the 2012 survey, compared to 63 percent in 2011 and 55 percent in 2010. ● METRO/AB

Subways or airports?

More New Yorkers said they wanted world-class luxury underground than on their way out of the city at the region's three airports. According to the survey, 61 percent of New Yorkers said they wanted a world-class subway, train and bus transportation. But only 37 percent said that amping up the quality of the airports was essential. ● METRO/AB

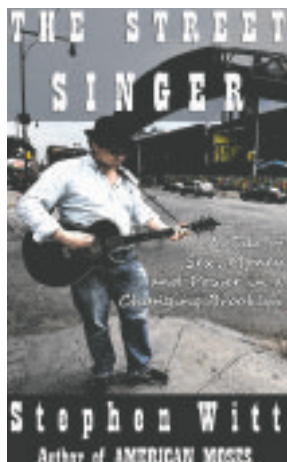

A satirical take on Atlantic Yards

► Back when the Brooklyn Nets were just a gleam in Jay-Z's eye, downtown Brooklyn was a battleground
 ► For some, Barclays Center controversy still very real

Long before the Barclays Center even existed, and back when the Nets were still playing in New Jersey, there was a fight in downtown Brooklyn, between a developer with a vision of a sports arena and soaring buildings, and homeowners fighting to preserve their neighborhood.

Barclays opened last month to great fanfare, and the Brooklyn Nets will take on the New York Knicks there on Nov. 1. But neighbors in the area complain about overcrowding and noise. Others are still waiting for the jobs and affordable housing that Atlantic Yards developer Bruce Ratner promised.

No matter which side of the Atlantic Yards debate you're on, Steve Witt's new satire of the controversy is worth a read. Longtime Brooklyn journalist Witt covered the Atlantic Yards saga from its beginning, and it's now the subject of his latest book, "The Street Singer."

Q: The novel's protagonist, a subway musician, is pretty supportive of the Barclays Center. Do you agree with him?

I'm supportive of the Barclays Center. Brooklyn, even with gentrification, remains heavily immigrant, and a third black, with many people struggling to live week to week. (But) the thought of Palestinian kids from Bay Ridge sitting next to Orthodox Jews from Borough Park next to kids from Brownsville in the nosebleed section of the arena to watch the Nets play makes me feel positive about the future.

Q: What do you say to criticism that the Barclays Center took people's homes away, via eminent domain, and that developer Ratner has yet to deliver on the jobs and affordable housing he promised?

As a journalist, I seldom bought into the eminent domain argument concerning Atlantic Yards. The gentrified few nearly killed the project with their endless court battles with eminent domain being among their trump cards. But they themselves displaced poor people to get property around Atlantic Yards. As for the affordable housing and jobs, Ratner's style is to build and not flip real estate, so I think it will get done.

Cops: 11 gun sellers nabbed

BROOKLYN. Three separate undercover operations conducted by the Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes and the NYPD resulted in the seizure of 154 illegal firearms, officials said Thursday.

Undercover officers spent the past two years buying illegal firearms from suspects throughout Brooklyn, police say. Eleven people were indicted as part of the sting, as well.

Illegal gun sales were made on Flatbush Avenue in East Flatbush, as well as in Crown Heights and Bushwick. Up to 14 of the weapons seized were reported stolen in several states, including South Carolina and one stolen from a Pennsylvania state trooper. ● METRO/CB

Q: What inspired you to write this novel?

The initial inspiration came after Mikhail Prokhorov bought the Brooklyn Nets. At the time Bruce Ratner was going broke and the economy hit the skids. The irony that it took a Russian oligarch to save a $5 billion project in New York City, the center of American capitalism, sparked the idea for a fictional satire about modern American society.

Greece: Violence at anti-austerity protests

ATHENS. Greek police clashed with anti-austerity protesters hurling stones and petrol bombs on the day of a general strike that brought much of the near-bankrupt country to a standstill.

In the second major walk-out in three weeks on Thursday, almost 40,000 protesters marched in Athens in a bid to show EU leaders meeting in Brussels that new wage and pension cuts will only worsen their plight after five years of recession.

Tensions mounted when a small group of protesters began throwing pieces of marble, bottles and petrol bombs at police barricading part of the square in front of parliament, prompting riot police to fire several rounds of tear gas to disperse them. REUTERS

After 79 years in print, Newsweek goes digital only

NEW YORK. Newsweek, one of the most internationally recognized magazine brands in the world, will cease publishing a print edition after nearly 80 years.

The decision to go all-digital, disclosed in a blog post on its companion website The Daily Beast, is indicative of the shift to media consumption on digital devices such as tablets and mobile phones and underscores the problems faced by newsweeklies in an increasingly commoditized, 24-hour news cycle.

The final print edition will hit newsstands on Dec. 31.

Widow relishes victory in anti-gay marriage law

Wearing a diamond brooch her wife, Thea Spyer, gave to her when she proposed in 1967, Edith "Edie" Windsor told reporters she will continue to fight, even after a federal appeals court struck down the Defense of Marriage Act Thursday.

This is the second ruling by a federal appellate court that deems DOMA unconstitutional for violating the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection. Experts predict the Supreme Court will soon take the issue.

For Windsor, the ruling marked a victory in a legal battle three years in the making. When Spyer died in 2009, she left her assets, including the New York City apartment the couple shared, to Windsor. Though the couple were legally married in Canada in 2007, Windsor was forced to pay $363,000 in federal estate taxes, though the fee would have been exempt for a widow of a same-sex marriage.

► Windsor said she "can't wait till the next phase."

Thursday's ruling means Windsor will be repaid that money from the government.

"I'm sure she is here with me in spirit and would have been so proud to see how far we've come," Windsor said of her late wife.

"Treating married New Yorkers like Edie and Thea like strangers under the eyes of the law is unfair, unjust, unconstitutional, disrespectful and plain wrong," NYCLU executive director Donna Lieberman said. "We celebrate today knowing we are one step closer to fulfilling the dream of real 100 percent relationship equality here in New York."

James Essex, director of the LGBT project at the ACLU said Windsor's case is one of four that ask the Supreme Court to rule on DOMA.

Mass. senator: Romney might lose home state

Massachusetts Sen. Scott Brown's worst nightmare is that his party's nominee, Mitt Romney, will set a record for presidential candidates.

Romney may lose his home state of 40 years, which he governed for four.

Recent voter surveys show Romney trailing President Barack Obama in the state by 14 to 33 percentage points.

To overcome the anticipated Obama tsunami in Massachusetts, Brown is counting on thousands of voters splitting their tickets to back him over his Democratic opponent, consumer advocate Elizabeth Warren, with whom he's running neck-and-neck in polls. Brown, who won the seat in a 2010 special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Edward M. Kennedy, needs every Obama voter he can get, including members of organized labor.

Romney takes to damage control

Mitt Romney's claim to have ordered up "binders full of women" to staff his Massachusetts cabinet has opened a fresh struggle with President Barack Obama for the backing of female voters, threatening to erode the Republican nominee's gains with a crucial constituency. Romney's comment at the second presidential debate sparked Internet ridicule, Democratic derision and days of damage control. On the campaign trail, the candidates courted women with differing messages. Romney said he could resolve their economic challenges, and Obama argued he is the one who values their concerns and contributions. BLOOMBERG

Think tank says Romney's tax plan won't work

Mitt Romney's proposed cap on itemizing tax deductions could not on its own raise enough new government tax revenue to compensate for revenues lost by the Republican presidential candidate's plan to slash income tax rates, a think tank said on Wednesday. REUTERS

What's wrong?

The Tax Policy Center, a non-partisan group, said his deductions cap could raise up to $1.7 trillion over 10 years. The center said earlier this year Romney's 20 percent tax rate cut would cost $4.8 trillion.

Romney disagrees

Romney has argued that his plan will not cost $4.8 trillion.

The Romney campaign had previously criticized the Tax Policy Center's estimates, saying they did not account for economic growth that can pay for tax cuts and that the center excluded some tax breaks in their studies.

The campaign has said the limit on itemized deductions would be only part of its plan to fund the rate cut. The Tax Policy Center admitted its latest estimates were based on an incomplete picture.

Likely voters overall believe Democrats are better for young Americans than Republicans by a 44 percent to 29 percent margin. For likely voters between 18 and 29 years old, this gap is an overwhelming 53 percent to 19 percent.

50

Obama campaign names 26 schools the president visited between the end of March and the beginning of October, while Romney aides estimated that the former governor has visited "roughly 50" campuses.

54%

Obama defeated Republican John McCain by a roughly two-to-one margin among voters aged 18 to 29 in 2008. This time, likely voters in this age group prefer Obama to Romney by 54 percent to 36 percent.

Jessica tossed the Help Wanted section onto the bar and grabbed a stool. A whole day of looking and a ruined pair of heels had turned up nothing. All she wanted now was a little quiet time to think up a new plan.

Hey, little lady, can I buy you a drink?" Oh no. She'd last seen him four years ago, promising every woman in the place wonderful things if only they'd help him one night in November. Now here he was, grinning on the stool to her left.

"Hi, Mr. President. Haven't seen you in a while."

Well, I've been making a better world for you," he said. "I passed the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act. What did you think of that?"

"It's okay, I guess, if you plan to sue your employer. But I haven't seen my pay change much. I'm unemployed."

Really? That's surprising since my economic recovery is going so well. Anyway, look, I've also promoted health care reform, I'm standing up for reproductive rights ..."

Jessica sighed.

"Yeah, but women are about more than Band-Aids and birth control. For example, did you make half your Cabinet women?"

"Um, no. More like a third."

"Maybe you should have borrowed some of Romney's binders."

They would forever treat women as prizes to be won, not whole human beings to be respected.

Someone lunged onto the stool to her right, and Jessica stifled a groan when she saw who it was.

"Did someone say Romney?"

"Hello, governor," she said.

Is he trying to sell you his whole 'GOP war on women,' act?" the newcomer grinned. "Listen, I love women. I've hired loads of them! And I gave them flexible schedules so they could be home in time to cook dinner."

"And you think I should vote for you because of that?"

"Some of my best friends are women," the men said in unison.

They started arguing, and Jessica gathered her things. They'd never understand. They would forever treat women as prizes to be won, not whole human beings to be respected.

And once election night is over, she thought, they'll forget all about us ... until the next campaign comes around.

Chefs dish on their favorite fall ingredients

- Autumn brings out a host of new foods for the city's eateries
- What the menu masters have put together for the chilly temps

Chef Ben Pollinger, Oceana

120 W. 49th St., 212-759-5941
His pick: Pumpkin

Why he's cooking with it:

"There are so many types of pumpkin and squash, each with a different flavor, texture and color. They can be showcased as an individual variety or as a blend for an overall great pumpkin flavor. They're visually stunning too, from orange to brown to red, green and blue."

His inspiration: "I wanted to show off ways to serve pumpkin and celebrate this wonderful harbinger of autumn."

Use it at home: To make a puree (to be used in pies or stirred into pasta or risotto):

1. Cut pumpkin in half from top to bottom.

2. Season the inside with salt and pepper.

 3. Roast at 350, cut-side down on a rimmed baking tray, with just a little bit of water in the tray to create some steam.

4. Roast until a paring knife easily goes right through the flesh (time will vary depending on the density and the size).

5. Let it cool, scoop the flesh off the skin and puree in a food processor.

► Telepan's roasted cauliflower "has been on our menu every fall since we've opened," says chef Bill Telepan.

Bill Telepan, Telepan

72 W. 69th St., 212-580-4300

His pick: Cauliflower

Why he's cooking with it:

"Cauliflower is a fall favorite in our house and in the restaurant. During the fall, purple, orange and Romanesco cauliflower show up at the green market and are so versatile; they are great with bacon, sautéed with garlic, cut into steaks or pureed."

How he's cooking with it: "At the restaurant, we've been offering a cauliflower soup for the month of October, and are getting ready to transition to a Telepan classic: roasted cauliflower. It's a dish with roasted cauliflower, pureed cauliflower, shell beans and fall greens with a hearty fall herb oil."

raw in salads or blanched and sautéed and used in pasta, soups, etc. I always gravitate toward ingredients that I can creatively use in different dishes."

How he's cooking with it: "In Delmonico's, we are using Tuscan kale as a sautéed side dish served alongside a veal chop with spaetzle and pancetta. In Delmonico's Kitchen, which is opening on Nov. 7, we will be serving a Tuscan Kale Caesar salad as well as a bean stew."

How you can cook with it: "Tuscan kale is very easy to use at home. You can simply dress it with a Caesar dressing and fresh Parmesan cheese or sauté it with garlic, lemon and sea salt for a side dish that will pair well with both meat and fish."

Her pick: Cucuzza

Cucu-what? "Cucuzza, pronounced ku-guu-zza, is a type of calabash [bottle gourd] that is popular in Southern Italy, especially in Sicily."

On her menu: Pasta with squash vines, garlic and tomato

How you can cook with it:

"[Cucuzza] has a mild flavor and retains a firm texture when cooked. Like zucchini, cucuzza can be sautéed, fried, baked, stuffed and added to soups. In certain parts of Sicily, cucuzza is also candied and used in some of the island's most opulent

Maria Loi, Loi

208 W. 70th St., 212-875-8600

Her pick: Krokos Kozanis (Greek saffron)

On her menu: Risotto with Krokos Kozanis

Why she's using it:

"Krokos Kozanis is known to have healing qualities and has been used as a remedy since ancient times in Greece. Our focus at Loi is producing delicious food that comes from pure ingredients, which contributes to the long-term well-being of our customers. Krokos Kozanis has been documented as an ingredient that can reinvigorate and strengthen the immune system. There are even appearances of Krokos Kozanis in Greek mythology."

Old-Fashioned Chicken Potpie

We turn to healthy (and delicious) cooking authority, Cooking Light, for a guilt-free version of the flaky, creamy, potato-rich classic. Find more recipes like these comforting mini pies in their new book, "The New Way to Cook Light."

Serves eight (serving size: about 1½ cups).

Crust:

- 6¾ ounces all-purpose flour (about 1½ cups), divided
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 7 tablespoons unsalted butter, chilled
- 5 tablespoons ice water

Filling:

- 2 teaspoons unsalted butter
- 1 cup chopped carrot
- ½ cup chopped onion

Tip

Homemade pie crust takes a bit of time to make, but the buttery flavor is worth it. Make individual pot pies by spooning servings into 12-ounce ramekins. Divide dough into eight portions, and roll to fit.

- 1 teaspoon chopped fresh thyme
- 3 cups fat-free, lower-sodium chicken broth
- 2½ cups cubed red potato (about 1 pound)
- 1.5 ounces (about ⅓ cup) all-purpose flour
- ⅓ cup water
- 2 cups diced cooked rotisserie chicken
- 1 cup frozen petite peas
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- Cooking spray
- 2 teaspoons 1% low-fat milk

Directions:

► 1. To prepare crust, weigh or lightly spoon 6.75 ounces (about 1½ cups) flour into dry measuring cups; level with a knife. Combine 6.75 ounces (about 1½ cups) flour and ¼ teaspoon salt in a large bowl; cut in 7 tablespoons butter with a pastry blender or two knives until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add 5 tablespoons ice water; stir just until moist. Press mixture gently

► 2. Preheat oven to 400.

► 3. To prepare filling, melt 2 teaspoons butter in a Dutch oven over medium-high heat.

Add carrot, onion and thyme; cook eight minutes or until vegetables are soft. Add broth and potato; bring to a boil. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Combine flour and ½ cup water in a small bowl; stir with a whisk until smooth. Return potato mixture to a boil. Slowly drizzle flour mixture into potato mixture, stirring constantly. Cook one minute or until mixture thickens. Stir in chicken, peas, ½ teaspoon salt and pepper. Spoon chicken mixture into an 11-by-7 glass or ceramic baking dish coated with cooking spray. Place dough on top of chicken mixture, pressing to edge of dish. Cut four slits in top of crust to allow steam to escape. Gently brush crust with milk. Bake at 400 for 50 minutes or until golden and bubbly. Let stand 10 minutes.

Cinnamon Crumble Apple Pie

Epicurious.com has been our go-to resource for many amazing meals. Now we can find over 250 of their best four-fork recipes, like this genius take on the classic apple pie, in "The Epicurious Cookbook," their first-ever cooking tome out at the end of the month. Yield: Makes eight servings

For crust:

- 1½ cups all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon granulated sugar
- ¼ cup (½ stick) chilled unsalted butter, cut into ½-inch cubes
- ¼ cup frozen vegetable shortening, cut into ½-inch cubes
- 3 tablespoons ice water, or more as needed
- ½ teaspoon apple cider vinegar

For filling:

- 3¼ pounds Granny Smith apples, peeled, cored, and sliced ¼-

- inch thick
- ⅔ cup granulated sugar
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted

For topping:

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- ¼ cup (packed) light brown sugar
- 1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons chilled, unsalted butter, cut into ½-inch cubes
- Vanilla ice cream, for serving

Make crust:

► 1. Mix the flour, salt and sugar in a large bowl. Add the butter and shortening; rub in with your fingertips until coarse meal forms. Mix 3 tablespoons ice water and the vinegar in a small bowl. Drizzle over the flour mixture; stir with fork until moist clumps form, adding more water by teaspoonfuls if dough is dry. Gather the dough into a ball; flat-ten into a disk. Wrap in plastic; refrigerate 30 minutes.

► 2. Position a rack in the center of the oven and preheat the oven to 400°F. Roll out the dough on a lightly floured surface to a 12-inch round. Transfer to a 9-inch glass pie dish. Trim the overhang to ½ inch; turn the edge under and crimp decoratively. Refrigerate while preparing the filling and topping.

Make filling and topping:

- 1. Mix the filling ingredients in large bowl to coat apples.
- 2. Blend the flour, sugars, cinnamon and salt in a processor. Add the chilled butter cubes; using on/off pulses, cut in until the mixture resembles wet sand.

Assemble and bake pie:

- 1. Toss the filling to redistribute juices; transfer to the crust, mounding in the center. Pack the topping over and around the apples. Bake the pie on a baking sheet until the topping is golden, about 40 minutes (cover top with foil if browning too quickly).
- 2. Reduce the oven temperature to 350°F. Bake until the apples in the center are tender when pierced and the filling is bubbling thickly at the edges, about 45 minutes longer. Cool until warm, about one hour. Serve with ice cream. ● METRO

This cider house rules

From carving into pumpkin flesh to quartering Cornish game hen, cutting into hearty foods is a revered autumn ritual. Likewise, we often figuratively cut into the heft of this fall fare by pairing it with wines rich in tannins, organic compounds that largely make up a fermented beverage's body and dry flavor profile. In other words, sips that make us pucker.

But what about cleansing our poultry-gorged palates? For this, you need acidity, too. That's one of many reasons why Eve's Cider's Autumn Stoscheck makes the case for popping open a crisp, sparkling cider: "It deserves a place at the American table alongside beer and wine," she defends. Not only is cider right in the middle of the two in terms of alcohol content, but it also has unique characteristics that serve well for food pairing. "[Cider] has the texture of tannin combined with a lot of bracing acidity, which you may get in a white wine — but you don't get the tannins in a white wine."

While Stoscheck and her husband produce a still cider on their small orchard in Van Etten, N.Y., they specialize in crafting champagne-style ciders primarily because, at this point, consumers expect bubbles. Just don't confuse any of their nine original blends with six-pack hard ciders manufactured with glucose syrup and artificial flavors.

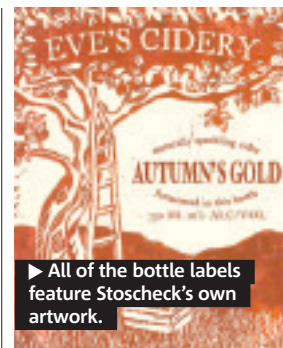

Eve's Ciders are made from upward of 30 apple varieties grown exclusively for brewing. It's harvest season in New York — the second largest apple producing state in the U.S. — and for Stoscheck that means the start of a new production cycle. "We press our apples in the fall

Coupling

We gave Stoscheck three scenarios and asked her to recommend a complementary cider.

You're going to a dinner party with a mystery menu: "I would bring our Autumn's Gold. It's our driest and most tannic cider, and to me it represents what you can do with traditional English cider varieties. It pairs well with almost anything."

You're preparing a traditional

► All of the bottle labels feature Stoscheck's own artwork.

Thanksgiving spread: "I would recommend our Northern Spy. It's a single variety cider that's made from a N.Y. state variety and it's mineral-y and dry as well. It's a really good palate cleanser for heavy stuff."

► You're a cheese fiend who's feeding the craving: "I would try the Rustica. We don't add sugar when we disgorge; we top it back up with concentrated juice. So it has a fresh, juicy flavor but it's alcoholic. It goes nicely with cheddar. If you were going to do something intense like an aged blue, I would recommend our ice cider, The Essence."

In a league of its own

Connoisseurs should note that locally made ciders differ from British or French ones because American cider farming is still in its adventurous youth, according to Stoscheck, who founded Eve's Cider just 10 years ago.

"In the same way that there's traditions around wine-making in the old world, it's corollary with cider," she says. "But we're a young country.

There's a lot of reinvention going on." This means that makers like herself have room to experiment, determining which apple varieties do and don't grow in the region and ultimately how to best express the aura of the place in which they're grown. The result is refreshing in more ways than one. "It's all just now happening, emerging," says Stoscheck, optimistically. "That's the fun thing about trying local ciders. We're inspired by European traditions, but we're not bound by them."

as they ripen and do a primary fermentation, then we age them in the winter," she explains. "In the spring, we do a secondary fermentation which will result in natural bubbles and then we disgorge; the process [of removing yeast] is just like making grape champagne." And that impassioned, yearlong process pays off in taste. "We want the bubbles to give that elegant mouth feel that you only get with a natural fermentation," she says.

'Paranormal Activity 4'

Rating: R
Grade: D+ D+ D+ D+ D+
"Paranormal Activity" fans (those of you who are left) are in for the same ride as usual — only this one should have never started. The fourth installment in the franchise offers viewers the same predictable thrills and a weak storyline that is all too familiar. The film picks up where the last movie left off, but this time the story follows a family who start to experience strange, paranormal happenings in their home when they take in a houseguest. By this stage in the series they've used up all the tricks in the book. Similar to the "Halloween" and "Friday the 13th" films, there are only so many times that viewers can tolerate seeing the same thing. It's gotten to the point where there is nothing left to squeeze out of this story. OLIVIA MORROW

'Alex Cross'

Rating: PG-13
Grade: D+ D+ D+ D+ D+
Tyler Perry is the new Alex Cross, stepping into the role Morgan Freeman made famous in "Kiss the Girls." In this new thriller the detective underestimates a serial killer (a skeletal Matthew Fox) and that rare mistake in judgment ends up changing his life. RICHARD CROUSE

The problems here are many, starting with a TV movie-ready script. The only unused cliché is, "Just the facts, ma'am," but we're sure screenwriters are already crafting that line into "Alex Cross 2: My Name's Not Madea." Then there is the miscast Perry. His wooden performance makes you wish Freeman was 20 years younger and still agreeable to chasing down bad guys.

Indie spotlight

'The Sessions'

Helen Hunt and John Hawkes star in this gentle drama based on the true story of Mark O'Brien (Hawkes), a man paralyzed from the neck down, who hires a vivacious sex surrogate (Hunt) to take his virginity.

'Brooklyn Castle'

This documentary follows the struggles of a chess team from a Brooklyn public school, I.S. 318, who are the country's champion junior high school team despite facing a number of financial difficulties.

'All Together'

This French comedy starring Jane Fonda tells the story of five elderly friends who decide to move in together to enjoy retirement, with the help of an attractive graduate student as their caretaker.

'The Flat'

This highly praised personal documentary from Israeli director, Arnon Goldfinger, is based on a journey taken by him and his mother as they face the task of cleaning out his grandmother's Tel Aviv apartment after she passes away. The film shows how they discover clues left behind by his grandparents, including unknown history and secrets from the past. OLIVIA MORROW

Happy high school diploma, Drake!

Just because you're world famous and fabulously wealthy doesn't mean you can skip on getting your high school diploma. On Wednesday, Drake tweeted the news that he graduated from high school — at 25 years old. He wrote, "97% on my final exam. 88% in the course. One of the greatest feelings in my entire life. As of tonight I have graduated high school." He added: "Thank you to my teacher Kim Janzen for spending the last 5 months working tirelessly with me!!"

Ashton Kutcher: For the win!

Here's a little perspective to kick off your weekend: Ashton Kutcher is not only having sexual relations with Mila Kunis but he's also pulling in a whopping $24 million a year.

So even though Kutcher is the butt of many jokes, maybe he's having the last laugh?

According to a new article in Forbes, the actor earned that huge salary courtesy of his starring role on the top-rated sitcom, "Two and a Half Men" (his tech investments also helped).

Following Kutcher were Hugh Laurie and Ray Romano, tied for second place at $18 million thanks to the syndication of "House" and "Everybody Loves Raymond." Next: Alec Baldwin of "30 Rock" and Mark Harmon of "NCIS" in another tie at $15 million a year, followed by Tim Allen, star of "Last Man Standing," at $14 million. Sadly, Jon Cryer, who always played second financial fiddle to Charlie Sheen on

"Men," is still losing out to his more handsome co-worker and is only bringing in $13 million.

One day the nerds will rise, Cryer, and you will have your due.

GOING THE DISTANCE

► The first nights of the CMJ Music Marathon in NYC yielded hybrids of hip-hop, punk, dance, socially conscious soul and good old-fashioned rock 'n' roll

Employing a divide and conquer strategy, Metro let its music-loving writers loose on the streets of New York City for the past few nights to hear what the future sounds like. Among the thousands of bands playing as part of the College Music Journal's annual blow out Music Marathon, these are the ones we're feeling right now.

Death Grips

Death Grips grabbed the audience by the neck and wrangled sweaty, writhing dance moves from the mosh pit. The feel was primitive and honest, the genre a blend of drum and bass hip-hop and tribal hard core. The crowd fed off vocalist MC Ride, who spit lyrics over slowed growly samples mashed into a rock dirge and punctuated by a popping drum kit. The laptop pushes a wall of sound through the audience with a bass so heavy it puts your innards into overdrive.

Motive

Let's call these guys The Strokes 2.0. These Seattle transplants peddle pure melodic rock, with catchy hooks that recall the best moments of The

Deap Vally

Considering the oversaturation of bleeps and bleeps lately, Joan Jett-esque grl rock duo Deap Vally are a welcome change. Skimpy, sequined outfits, long hair and heavy rockin' are the name of the game for these L.A. women who are already signed to Island Records and will open for Muse in Europe later this fall. Rewind your clock to the '70s and get down with Lindsey Troy's raspy vocals.

► Death Grips

Killers and the fuzzy vocals that remind us of a more cheerful Julian Casablancas. With their videos getting top ratings on MTV.com, soon everyone will have some Motive of their own.

Flying Lotus

Flying Lotus' expansive smile and wide range as a DJ kept pace with a crowd still feeling the highs of Death Grips. The DJ/producer managed to blend Radiohead and Erykah Badu, both are frequent collaborators, with his own mellifluous rhythms.

Mykki Blanco

Mykki Blanco, the alter ego of Michael Quattlebaum Jr., mixed a helping of tribal beats with her radical rap to a young face-paint laden crowd at the FADER Fort pop-up space in Williamsburg. The solo artist follows in the nontraditional path of recent indie hip-hop a la Odd Future, successfully dipping into punk and electro while retaining individuality.

Cody ChessnuTT

Cody ChessnuTT provides the type of socially conscious lyrics that Gil Scott-Heron perfected, but with the type of warm and beautiful timbre that Marvin Gaye perfected. ChessnuTT treated listeners to tunes from his long-awaited "Landing on a Hundred," which comes out Oct. 30, almost exactly 10 years and one month after his last full-length album. With subject matter ranging from a disrespectful nephew to the redemption of somebody who "used to smoke crack back in the day," this is sociopolitical soul.

Edgar Oliver: Not so misunderstood

► The scariest haunted house you'll hear about this season is the setting of this one-man show ► But it only exists in the mind of man behind 'Helen & Edgar'

Here's the thing about one-man shows: There's a 50/50 chance they'll suck, and even the best ones shouldn't have the hubris to last past an hour and a half. But "Helen & Edgar" is the exception. Hailed by best-selling author Neil Gaiman as a "genius," Edgar Oliver was first discovered at the famous storytelling showcase, The Moth. His talent for telling the true tales of his riveting, "Grey Gardens"-esque childhood catapulted him into popularity, leading to his two-hour one-man show now playing at Theater 80.

In it, Oliver recounts chapters of his unique adolescence in Savannah, Ga., in the company of his mother, Louise, and sister, the titular Helen: "Mother used to say to us, 'Beware of other people. They won't understand you. We're different. We're artists.' So all throughout my childhood it was always just the three of us — Mother, Helen and me."

Raised in the wounded, delusional abstract of reality dictated by their sick mother, the siblings see nothing strange about living in a house towering with trash and treasures, well before the age of "Hoarders." The ivy-clad domicile be-trunks and chests of drawers and crates and armoires and boxes all locked and filled with Mother's secrets," Oliver explains in his hypnotic, hyper-articulate cadence. "Almost no one ever made it into our house, especially relatives. Mother was deeply suspicious of relatives."

Oliver takes listeners on a raw, riveting and — despite its eccentricity — highly relatable journey. After all, what adult hasn't suffered along the path to freedom from their parents and past? But can these two especially affected siblings ever truly escape their mother and become well-adjusted independents? Find out — it's just $25 for one hell of a fascinating Southern Gothic folktale.

You know what he meant; focus on the achievement

RE: "GOP CANDIDATE'S REPLY GOES VIRAL" (METRO, OCT. 18) People with the most minimal intellect should be able to figure out that when Romney talked about binders full of women, he meant their résumés. Frankly, I can't figure out what all the hullabaloo is about. If this is the best that Obama's supports can come away with from the debate, then it's obvious that Romney is doing quite well. By the way, when Romney was governor, his cabinet had the most percentage of women in leadership positions than any state in the nation. I wonder how many tweets that tidbit of information got.

DAVID FRIEDLANDER, VIA E-MAIL

Mitt Romney is catching quite a bit of heat for his binder full of woman comment which is unfortunate. He did what any courageous leader who was unwilling to accept the status quo should do. He immediately realized when he became governor that there was an unequal number of women employed there compared to the number of men. He then directed his team to interview for qualified people and compile a list, which is where the binder came from. That was the right thing to do. The focus should be on how woman employed by the Obama administration currently make 18% less than their male counterparts, or how the poverty levels among woman in this country is at a 17-year high. If I were a female voter, those are the statistics I would focus on.

JOEY WHITMOYER, VIA E-MAIL

Nothing wrong with a little moderation

RE: "THESE ARE THE TIMES THAT TRY MEN'S SOULS — AND FACTS" (METRO, OCT. 18) Your editor's note states that Obama did not refer to the attack on the embassy as an act of terror. That goes a little too far. He mentioned the attack and then talked about acts of terror. He was including that attack on a list of acts of terror.

HARRY THORN, VIA E-MAIL

RE: "NO FOURTH WALL FOR FOURTH ESTATE" (METRO, OCT. 18) Candy Crowley did nothing wrong in correcting Mitt Romney. President Obama claimed he used the term "acts of terror" the following day in the Rose Garden. Romney, in his usual reckless fashion, basically called the president a liar. Crowley, who happened to be there that day, clarified: "He did, in fact, sir." This was perfectly within the bounds of moderating, asking pointed follow-ups, and getting at the truth.

Isn't that the purpose of these debates? Secondly, why is Romney's team splitting hairs on this? Did we initially believe that the attack was planned or spontaneous — who cares? It was only natural to connect it to the mobbing of the U.S. embassy in Cairo that same day.

The key is not how it was defined and when; the point is that it happened, now how did we respond? Romney doesn't seem to have any specific criticism of our military and security response to the attack, only this pointless argument over when it was publicly declared a "planned act of terror" rather than a spontaneous act of terror.

RICHARD FEINBERG, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Today could launch an extremely significant cycle for you, especially where your finances and material needs are concerned. If you handle things right, surpluses will abound.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Those whom you always feel compelled to please may do a role reversal and perform something nice for you. This change in your relationship will allow you to hold the strings.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. There is a time for sowing and a time for reaping. You're now in a period in which you will be paid back in large measure by those to whom you've given so much.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Some exciting new developments could be in the offing where your social life is concerned. Both a few old and new friends will play big roles.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. It would be a good thing to start elevating your sights in terms of your more ambitious objectives. Once you get on a roll, many remarkable achievements are possible.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Something is stirring that could produce an advantageous effect upon your future hopes and desires. Prepare yourself for all your tomorrows and look forward to what they'll offer.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Now is the time to make that move, maneuver or adjustment you've been contemplating where your work is concerned. Everything is looking good for making such a change.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. If a significant and necessary decision is staring you in the face, it's the day to take action. Depend on your good judgment and common sense to make the right choice.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. A smart friend who is concerned about your welfare is likely to offer you some unusual advice. Even if it sounds strange, think it through until you understand its essence.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. This is an excellent day to spend some time sorting out things that have been trying and confusing. Once you work things out, you can reorganize your life for maximum efficiency.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. There is no need to allow self-doubts to intimidate you, because you have the answers needed to produce the end results you desire. Figure out what you want and then do it.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Chance could play a big role in bringing about success. You're apt to say the right thing at the right time to the right person. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

What went wrong ...

1 Power righty — The Yankee struggles against right-handed pitchers was obvious in the whole series. Never was it more so than facing Justin Verlander and Max Scherzer back-to-back.

2 Leadoff disaster — After Derek Jeter went down in Game 1, the Yankees needed a leadoff hitter. Instead, they got 0-for-11 the next three games between Ichiro and Brett Gardner.

3 Triple Crowned — You can't beat the Tigers if you don't get Miguel Cabrera out. He had a .381 on-base percentage, a homer in Game 4 and four RBIs.

● METRO

▶ CC Sabathia pitched uncharacteristically terribly in Game 4. He lasted just 3 2/3 innings, surrendering six runs and 11 hits.

OUT LIKE A LAMB

▶ Yankees' season ends with embarrassing showing in Game 4 ▶ Bats go down silently to Scherzer ▶ Sabathia allows six runs over 3 2/3 innings

The Yankees' season officially died Thursday at 7:35 p.m. The preliminary autopsy report lists the cause of death as impotent offense.

The season began its slow and painful death Saturday and Sunday with losses at Yankee Stadium. The pace accelerated Tuesday in Detroit and finally keeled over in all facets as the Yankees were eliminated from the ALCS with an ugly 8-1 loss Thursday afternoon.

The Yankees hit an astounding low .157 in losing to Detroit for the third time in the postseason. The Yankee bats also batted .188 in nine playoff games while striking out 83 times.

The Yankees hit a miserable .157 in the postseason, with the heart of the order — Alex Rodriguez, Nick Swisher and Robinson Cano — going 11-for-95 (.116).

Up and down the lineup — with the exception of Ichiro and Raul Ibanez — there were underachieving hitters on a roster with the highest payroll in the game.

Nick Swisher returned after his one-game benching and in what was likely his last game for the Yankees went 1-for-4 and finished the postseason with five hits in 30 at-bats.

Robinson Cano was hitless in four at-bats, 1-for-18 in the series and 3-for-40 in the postseason, a performance that followed up a .313 regular season and 24 hits in his last 39 regular season at-bats.

Alex Rodriguez was not in the starting lineup for the third time in the postseason and a day after trade rumors mentioned Miami as a destination, he pinch hit for Ibanez in the sixth and flied out to center. He also made the second out of the ninth and has gone 86 at-bats without a postseason home run while going 3-for-25 in his eighth postseason as a Yankee.

► Tebow may be carrying the ball in a more traditional format this weekend against the Patriots.

Jets might try out Tebow at tailback

- Greene only running back healthy for Pats matchup
- Ryan says he has skills to play position permanently

With running backs Bilal Powell and Joe McKnight unable to practice for a second straight day, the Jets' running game could get a boost from none other than Tim Tebow — just not in his traditional role under center.

Tebow could add another duty to his resume this Sunday as a running back. Since Powell and McKnight represent the Jets' second and third running backs on their depth chart, they desperately could use depth at the position.

"That's a possibility. The thing about Tim, with him being a football player like we've talked about, by playing quarterback he knows all the positions," head coach Rex Ryan said. "Can you plug him in at running back? Can you plug him in at tight end? I think the answer is yes."

Ryan also sees Tebow — often panned for his throwing mechanics but praised for his athletic abilities — as someone who could transition to running back if need be.

"I think you start with a skill set, but I think his skill set would be more based on power," Ryan said. "I think he's not going to be a blazer compared to other running backs but he has power."

Through the season's first six games, Tebow has 18 rushes for 64 yards, all of which came either as the Wildcat quarterback or in a trick play as the personal punt protector.

Chiming in earlier this week, Patriots head coach Bill Belichick alluded to just what Ryan suggested Thursday.

"He carries the ball quite a bit so to some degree he's a running back," Belichick said.

It may be the first and last time Ryan and Belichick agree on something.

 KRISTIAN DYER
sports@metro.us

What to watch for ...

1 Secondary is primary — The biggest struggle year in, year out for the Jets has been corraling Patriots wide receivers and tight ends and limiting Tom Brady's options over the middle. This year could be different with the offseason acquisition of physical safeties Yeremiah Bell and LaRon Landry.

2 Pesky Wildcat — Through six games, the Tim Tebow-led Wildcat hasn't produced as expected, partly due to the offensive line having difficulty executing anything related to the running game. After running the ball so effectively against the Colts, the Jets need more of the same this week. In the Wildcat they can eat up yards, spell running back Shonn Greene a bit, change field position and control the clock.

3 Locked up — It says something that Mark Sanchez answered questions with his 11-for-18, 82-yard performance last week. Yes, he was efficient and he did throw two touchdowns, but the proclaimed face of the franchise simply managed the game. Is this the best that can be expected of a first-round pick now in his fourth year? It wasn't necessarily pretty, but they'll need Sanchez to do the same.
